Gangster' Cleared Of Rape

February 26, 2001 13:04: A “gun-toting gangster” who had a steamy affair with a drug counsellor while behind bars has been cleared of raping the middle-aged woman after his release from prison.

Inner London Crown Court was told Carlon Robinson, 26, was seduced by the woman while in jail after bogus treatment sessions were arranged to wean him off cannabis.

Instead of anti-drug advice, she gave him oral sex on their first meeting and the pair then made love on her office carpet. The couple resumed their liaison when Robinson was released last September and celebrated his freedom at her flat with drink, drugs and sex.

The court was told the affair turned sour after she refused to smuggle drugs into prison for a friend and then claimed Robinson raped her. Robins was cleared of raping the 44-year-old in Streatham on September 19.

He was arrested in Brighton, but had lived at his mother's home in Vaughan Williams Close, in Deptford, during his short spell of freedom.

After the unanimous not guilty verdict, Robinson said he intended to sue the complainant, police and prison. He also said he would compose a rap song about his experiences.
